MIXING THINGS IN THE BALKANS

EVIDENTLY there is considerable anxious activity in the way and another on the Balkan peninsula. One might be justified in the conclusion that historic bit of territory is at the present time just about the center of a great war plot. And it begins to look so far as one may judge from outward aspects of the plotting that English diplomacy has won against the German.

Yet there is another view, and it is not altogether unreasonable, namely, that Germany all along has been satisfied that Bulgaria, Roumania and Greece were not to be enlisted as fighting partners under the same banner or in the same general cause as the Turk. So with respect to the Balkans, Germany may have played rather an evasive and a waiting game, thus assuring the neutrality of these people so long as Russia was knocking at the German-Austria frontiers. Had Balkan belligerency been precipitated at that time the effect might have been quite different than is likely if it is now brought to a head.

At no time until now, as it may have been, was Germany ready to turn attention to the Dardanelles. Perhaps the Russian was to be beaten first; and when he was beaten and a way was wanted or must be had for Germany to strike in support of the Turk, it was then time enough to let the issue of Balkan neutrality be forced to a finality. The rumored declaration of war on Austria's part rather indicates that, with the time ripe, German diplomacy is about to do the forcing.

It is almost impossible for the outside and lay student of the entire war situation to satisfy himself whether the best of this Balkan plot lies with the Germans or with the entente allies. If Germany has hopes of Balkan co-operation as one of the moral effects of victory over Russia, the existing situation would seem to be the defeat of the German hope. If, on the other hand, Germany has had a well formulated program with the decisive blow at the Dardanelles as the objective, the existing status might be said to give Germany the best of it.—Portland Telegram.

What the War Moves Mean

By J. W. T. MASON
(Staff Correspondent United Press)

England's reply to Germany's tentative peace suggestions is in effect a request for more details. It is in no sense a refusal to harken to the German proposal. The British point out that the demand for freedom of the seas is vague, and that nothing is said regarding France and Belgium.

When Germany is willing to make a definite statement regarding the disposition of this territory now in her hands, then it is possible Great Britain will speak more effectively.

The overthrow of militarism is attainable, indirectly. It is probable that England would consider militarism defeated if France and Belgium were evacuated without Germany demanding indemnities, particularly if Germany would give Belgium money for reconstruction. England's efforts to put negotiations on detailed basis is a step in the right direction. At present public opinion is the dominant influence, and publicity is necessary to the fundamental details.

All bargaining will proceed cautiously, because the negotiators are reluctant to reveal the concessions they are prepared to make. But the war's cost of $500,000,000 weekly is a vast factor toward urging the elimination of slow diplomacy.

The Man Who Kissed Bryan and the Lady He Kisses Every Day

Mrs. Joseph C. Graber.

Joseph C. Graber

Here is the man who put Kingman, Kas., on the map the other night when he kissed Wm. J. Bryan before a large audience. And also Mrs. Graber whom he kisses regularly. But Mr. Graber is not a German at all, and he didn't kiss Mr. Bryan because he thought the former secretary of state was trying to prevent a war with Germany. Mr. Graber was a Russian, now he is a first-class American, for he has been in the United States, and in Kansas at that, for thirty-two years. So Mr. Bryan's alleged friendliness for Germany had nothing to do with it—he just kissed the Nebraskan because he loved him. An eye witness of the kiss has sent out this description of the scene:

"When Mr. Graber kissed Mr. Bryan it was just after the Nebraskan had finished his speech here and the people were shaking hands with him. Graber is of a retiring disposition, and stood back for a while. He then went up to Bryan and said:

"Mr. Bryan, I have read your paper for years, and always admired you. He then leaned over toward Bryan. Bryan evidently thought that Graber wanted to whisper to him, for he, too, leaned over. Before he knew what was going on Graber had taken hold of him around the neck with both arms and kissed him on the cheek, and then said:

"I promised my God that when I heard you talk if you came up to my standard of a man I would kiss you."

"Bryan blushed clear to the back of his head, and patted Graber on the back. About all Bryan said about it afterward was that he 'hoped the papers wouldn't put him in the Hobson class.' There is a large colony of the Russians here, and nearly all of them are Menonites, and most of them bear the name of Graber. Joseph Graber is looked up to by the rest of the 'family' as a sort of leader. He has an elegant home, modern in every way, including gas lights. All buildings are large and well kept. He has the best machinery, including tractor and automobile, large barns, silo, and everything that goes to make an ideal farm. He raises good stock and has two stallions he imported from Belgium that he keeps for breeding purposes."

EVENTS IN THE WAR ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

- British cross the Marne, Germans retreat 25 miles. Believed success of allies in checking the Germans greater than war office announcements indicate.
- Berlin reports Maubege taken, with 40,000 prisoners. Bordeaux dispatches denies.
- St. Petersburg reports Russian Poland free of Austrians.
- The Kaiser has sent a protest to President Wilson against the participation of the Belgium people in the war and a statement of regret at the destruction of interesting places. Declares the English are using dum-dum bullets.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR TURNS GRAY, FADED HAIR DARK AND GLOSSY

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

AN EYESIGHT TALK

I wish I could talk to you face to face and urge upon you the necessity of taking every possible care of your Eyesight.

Do you know that seventy-five out of every 100 persons have defective vision, and that Eyesight Defects (if allowed to go unremedied with correctly adjusted glasses) mean defective work, irritation and dissatisfaction, headache and neurasthenia? Are you sure your eyes are perfect?

You are not, then call today and let me make a thorough scientific examination and give you advice and help which will preserve your vision.
